PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

The lifeblood of Huntingdon College is her people—the students, faculty, staff, alumni, friends, and neighbors who tread the brick pathways, are educated in the classrooms, serve and work in their communities after graduation, and support the College through time, talent, and treasure.

Two years ago, people from all walks of Huntingdon gathered to share their thoughts about the College's future. Rooted in mission and history, we talked about where Huntingdon should be at the end of the plan. Whom should we serve? How can Huntingdon reach more students who would benefit from the experience and graduate them ready to make an impact on the world they will enter? What can we do to fortify our physical infrastructure, our fiscal soundness, and our ability to serve Huntingdon students and graduates?

"Building Great Lives," the 2018–2023 Huntingdon College strategic plan adopted in May 2018, responds to those questions. In this magazine, you will read about some of the components of the plan, based on these four themes:

- Enrollment: creating experiential enrollment initiatives, such as the Presidential Fellows program (story, page 5).
- Facilities: strengthening and expanding the physical facilities (story, page 7).
- Service to Students: placing student service at the center of all we do through a relevant, forward-thinking core curriculum that addresses vocational calling, ethical reasoning, and critical thinking (story, page 9).
- Financial Resources: funding plan components through an $11.1 million capital campaign (see page 41).

The themes are not mutually exclusive—the success of each depends on the success of the other. We can't fulfill our plans for students, for example, without the funding to do so, and without the space or facilities to complete the vision. We can't provide the learning objectives unless we have the students who want and can benefit from the programs. And so on, and so on.

For this journey to be a success, we need you to be with us. Your support—especially your financial support—provides critical confirmation that the College can continue its mission of educating students so that graduates can approach their professional, adult lives having developed a sense of who they are called to be, what they believe, and where their gifts meet the world's needs.

Every day, Huntingdon alumni impact the world. I invite you to help us reach more students and change more lives—and the world—for the better.

Faithfully your president,

J. Cameron West

In 2016, as the strategic planning process began, our first Building Great Lives edition of Huntingdon College Magazine featured five Huntingdon men. This year, as the 2018–2023 Huntingdon College Strategic Plan, Building Great Lives, has been adopted, we introduce you to the five women in charge of the Student Government Association. You'll also learn about important plan initiatives, as well as ways you can be involved to help the College move forward.

CONTINUING THE JOURNEY

Building Great Lives

2018 has been touted as the Year of the Woman, especially in reference to the number of women who ran for political office—and won. Perhaps, then, the Huntingdon Student Government Association executive council (EC) elections in March were a predictor of things to come, as every elected position went to the woman candidate.

Certainly, these women are making their mark on Huntingdon history. Much like a white blaze trail marker on the Appalachian Trail, they have set their course to bring order and direction to SGA meetings.

Virginia Gaston '20 is the daughter (Jackie Gaston '90 and Mary Shea Buchanan Gaston '91), niece (Jennifer Gaston Rodopoulos '88 and Steve Rodopoulos '90), and granddaughter (Maryetta Propst Buchanan '62) of alums. As vice president, she oversees the Senate meetings, which occur every Monday evening at 9:00. The EC doubled the senate this year, asking for two representatives from organizations and majors where there used to be just one. Now, there are 75 senators, and average attendance is 68.

"Virginia has really made a difference by reinstating parliamentary procedure for SGA meetings," says Jordan Fleming '20, secretary.

"Order is important," agrees Savannah Gibbs '20, president. Also a legacy, she is the daughter of Elizabeth Taylor Gibbs '94. "Not only does order help us get things done, it gives everyone the opportunity to learn how to be professional and personable at the same time. We're all going to need those skills in our professional lives."

"Order has also helped us create a safe environment," says Gaston. "I think we've made SGA a place where everyone feels like their voices are heard and they can speak honestly about a topic. It's been very helpful for me, professionally, because I have to consider everyone's opinions, weigh them, and determine whose hold more weight and whose facts are true."

This year's EC has resurrected the President's Council, which includes the presidents of each of the student organizations, if they are not already on the senate. It's Gibbs' job to oversee that body, as well as the executive council.

"We've been trying to concentrate on some of the bigger projects—the ones where we can really make a difference," says Gibbs. SGA has a $90,000 budget, and much of their meeting time is absorbed in sorting out the best ways to spend that money. Student organizations come to SGA for extra funding when project costs exceed their budgets, such as the College Democrats offering refreshments to the crowd during a recent candidate visit.

Under consideration at present are a project to purchase new furniture for the second floor lounge areas in the Wilson Center, as well as a conference table and a rolling whiteboard; pouring a concrete slab to replace the wooden stage and adding a pavilion and lights in the Grove; and adding more picnic tables around campus.

"We met with President West, who said he would like for there to be more student gathering spaces around campus, and that's exactly what we would like, as well," says Gibbs.

As the student leaders on campus, these five women create the spaces and the environment in which students' voices are heard and their needs and concerns are addressed.

"It's hard to realize that you're really making a difference," says Gaston, "but as we talk about all of these things, we really have done a lot this year."

"It's tiring, it's exhausting, but it's worth it," adds Fleming.

All five women say they fell in love with Huntingdon immediately when they came for a visit. "It's the perfect amount of college," says Justala Simpson '20, SGA director of public relations. "We are small and quaint, but we have just enough of the fancier amenities. I love that everyone knows everyone. We're in a perfect location. We're a college, but we're a family, too."

"After my first tour, I knew I would call this place home," says Sidney Carol Hall '19, SGA treasurer. "I fell in love with the people I met and the feeling of family and community."

And their love for the campus hasn't diminished.

"It's even better now, because we get to play a part in what makes this place so special," says Gaston. ■

THE PRESIDENTIAL FELLOWS PROGRAM

Strategic Plan Theme I: Creating Experiential Enrollment Initiatives

Imagine that you're considering colleges on the merits of the academic and active learning experiences you'll gain. You don't play a sport with the intensity of participating in intercollegiate athletics, and band and cheerleading are not part of your college aspirations. You just want to learn and do. And you want to learn and do as much as possible—to be engaged, fully, in the living and learning experience that is offered at a residential undergraduate-focused college.

Look no further.

New for students entering in the fall of 2019 is the Presidential Fellows program, developed as part of the College's Building Great Lives strategic plan. The program, already recruiting students and under the direction of Leanne Mallory '05, the College's director of strategic initiatives since July 1, was designed to attract high-achieving student-leaders who want to be immersed fully in their college experience and who are not involved in other campus teams. The program encourages personal and professional development, provides individual and collective networking and community-building, and promotes scholarship through academic colloquy and individual study. Participation includes a $5,000 stackable scholarship awarded on top of selected Huntingdon Honors Scholarships and financial aid.

Mallory says the target group of students includes those who are academically strong, intellectually curious, excited about learning, and eager to serve. Minimum qualifications for acceptance into the Presidential Fellows program are an ACT of 23 and a 3.0 high school grade point average, whether the applicant is a prospective freshman or transfer student. The applicant should be accepted to the College simultaneously with or prior to applying to the program. To fill the initial Fellows spaces, there are three application deadlines, with the first participants selected after Dec. 1; the second group after Feb. 1; and the third group after April 1, if places remain. Presidential Fellows applications are submitted online, as are applications for admission.

Leanne Mallory '05

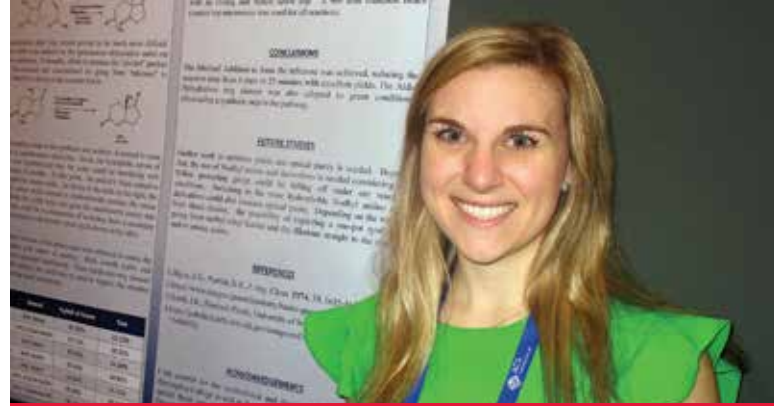

The program fits not only with cohort-specific recruitment initiatives identified in the strategic plan, but also with the College's emphasis on vocational identification and exploration. Presidential Fellows will do far more than attend classes and listen to lectures. To deepen engagement in line with students' interests, each Fellow will identify an academic team in which s/he will participate for 10 hours each week. The teams include (but are not limited to):

- Ability First Team—working with peers through the College's Ability First (disability services) Resource Center or with community youth through the Huntingdon Ability Sport Network (youth wheelchair sport teams).
- Academic Mentoring Team—providing leadership, tutoring, and other academic guidance and support for students and/or academic programs.
- Forensics/Debate Team—serving in or leading individual and team rhetorical events and preparing debaters for competition.

- Media Production/Social Media Team—recording and reporting college activities and events and creating content for College social media accounts.
- Sports Marketing and Broadcasting Team—promoting, recording, and reporting events and creating content for Huntingdon's NCAA-III teams' social media accounts.
- Student Technology Support Team—supporting instructional/classroom technology initiatives for faculty and students.

The Undergraduate Science Research Team is another option for Presidential Fellows.

- Undergraduate Science Research Team—participating in undergraduate research with faculty in the sciences and/or serving as faculty research assistants or lab assistants.

Each team will be coached by a member of faculty, working cooperatively with staff and other faculty in selected areas.

In addition, Fellows will participate in Student Affairs programming; complete annual service projects; complete a Capstone project; live in the College's on-campus residential community; fulfill general program requirements; and remain in good standing academically and in conduct. The program is renewable through graduation as long as the requirements are met, or for four years, whichever comes first. Because of the time commitment involved, the Presidential Fellows program is not open to students who will participate in intercollegiate athletic teams, band, or cheer.

Mallory, who completed a Master of Education degree in higher education administration at the University of Alabama, gathered extensive preparation for her new position by working with students and faculty in first-year experience and retention initiatives at UA. She also served as program coordinator for recruitment and training and as a residence coordinator for university housing at Florida State University.

"The Presidential Fellows Program will provide opportunities for participants not only to build and strengthen their academic skills, but also to build their resumes and portfolios for the future," says Mallory. "At the same time, Fellows will build friendships with their academic teams and coaches, be involved in the social life of the College, and live in community with other students in our residential village. Fellows is a unique program designed to complement the outstanding liberal arts curriculum that already exists here at Huntingdon. Participants will expand their abilities to think critically and ethically, to act with reason, and to grow in confidence for their future pursuits. And ...," she adds with a smile, "they'll have a whole lot of fun!"

BUILDING A VILLAGE

Strategic Plan Theme II: Strengthening the Physical Facilities

When Huntingdon's campus moved from Tuskegee to Montgomery in 1909, it settled into a space rough-drafted from farmland, accessible by dirt paths. Built around a central Green designed by Frederick Law Olmsted on 58 acres (give or take), the College grew, sometimes pushing across the boundary streets that formed to define it, but mostly remaining in that original designated space.

The 2001 purchase of the former Cloverdale School buildings and property, including athletic fields, allowed the campus to break across its northern boundary, Fairview Avenue.

So much happens when there's room to grow. The new Cloverdale Campus offered just the right space to construct Charles Lee Field, then W. James Samford Jr. Stadium, and to establish the Dr. Laurie Jean Weil Center for Teacher Education and Human Performance, James W. Wilson Jr. Gymnasium, Leo J. Drum Jr. Theater, a wrestling room, the Alice D. Reynolds Outdoor Volleyball Court, a physical therapy clinic operated by Pro-Impact Sports Medicine, and classrooms and offices for a variety of College programs. With the added facilities, cohort-specific recruitment for programs such as football, men's and women's lacrosse, men's wrestling, women's volleyball, and women's beach volleyball nearly doubled Huntingdon's enrollment from 2003 to 2015.

Several years ago, housing needs for the growing residential student population and a desire to offer more living choices that encourage students' journeys to independence led the College to purchase a few houses on College Court, across Fairview Avenue from the baseball field. These houses have become homes for Greek sororities and for upper-level students in other groups. To date, Huntingdon owns eight properties on College Court, but the newest housing opportunities don't end there.

This year, the College has purchased the former Richardson's Pharmacy and an adjacent building, the former Capitol Book & News property and an adjacent lot, two homes along the south side of Fairview near CB&N, and three apartment buildings on the north side of Fairview across from Bellingrath Hall.

The housing properties have been a need for many years. As students come to live on campus, they leave the more watchful surveillance of their parents and begin to breathe fresher air and to acquaint themselves with new freedoms. But there are still rules, made and enforced by others. As students spread their wings, they want more open space in which to fly—they long to make decisions about their own lives. Simultaneously, they become better prepared to live with the consequences of those decisions. That's what the journey to independence is about, and that's the type of living environment accommodated by off-campus housing that is still under the purview of the College, but that allows greater student autonomy.

Jordan Fleming '20, of Sheffield, Ala., lives in one of the houses on College Court. "Living off campus, but also being part of campus, gives you freedom," she says. "But it's freedom within boundaries. We still have room checks, we have security driving up and down the street and a security system on the house. It's safe, which was helpful when I told my mom about moving [into a neighborhood house], but it also gives you a sense of accountability and independence."

SGA President Savannah Gibbs '20 agrees. "It's also helpful that we still have the meal plan, and we're only a short walk away from campus."

Recent improvements on the main campus have contributed to enrollment growth and enhanced student engagement, as well. During the last 15 years, generous gifts have made possible the George Gibbs Tennis Center; Roland Arena and Roland Student Center; Seay Twins Art Gallery; the Phyllis Gunter Snyder Center for Campus Ministries in Jackson Home; improvements to Smith Music Building and to the dining hall; and an expansion of Bellingrath Hall. Increased enrollment has funded the renovation of Ligon Hall, Trimble Hall, and a floor of Hanson Hall for campus housing. In 2018, a new Huntingdon Bands Rehearsal Hall opened in what once was the pool area of Roland Student Center, and the soccer and softball fields—shared space for decades—were finally made independent. In less than two decades, Huntingdon has built a village.

Soon, improvements to Houghton Library will transform the entrance into the Caroline Slawson Campus Commons, adding classrooms, coffee, and academic offices. The College hopes to keep the library open 24 hours when classes are in session, providing a space where students may gather, study, discuss, and commune comfortably any time they wish.

The next step? Pending funding raised as part of the Building Great Lives capital campaign that supports the strategic plan initiatives, there are plans to develop a wellness center on the main campus, to include a competition-sized indoor pool, an outdoor recreation pool, 24-hour available cardio equipment, an indoor walking track, and an indoor climbing wall. This facility will provide a unique internship environment for students majoring in sport management, as well as providing wellness facilities for use by students, faculty, staff, alumni, and College neighbors. In addition, the College could expand athletic teams to add swimming and diving.

The College's newest homes and apartment buildings will be used for housing. The College bookstore, now known as the Scarlet and Grey Shop, will move to the Capitol Book & News building. The lot adjacent to CB&N will be used for parking. Plans for the former Richardson's Pharmacy and adjacent building are to be determined, and many possibilities, including third-party enterprises, are under consideration. As with the addition of the Cloverdale properties, the facilities acquired just this year open wide new prospects for the College's future.

As more properties become available along Fairview near campus, it is the College's intention to add them to the Huntingdon Village. After all, so much happens when you have room to grow. ■

For more information on the Building Great Lives Strategic Plan, see the President's Message, page 2.

Several options are under consideration for the former Richardson's Pharmacy and adjacent building, including third-party enterprises.

What's the purpose of an undergraduate education?

To expose a student to possibilities for his/her future? To learn from the past in hopes that knowledge will thwart future mistakes and stimulate future successes? To expand one's thinking, scope, skills, and talents to provide better intellectual tools or active wisdom that can be used as needed in the future? To facilitate professional pathways, job or graduate school success?

Truth be told, all of the above are true.

According to a 2011 Pew Research Center study, 47% believe the purpose of undergraduate education is to develop work-related skills and 39% believe it is to help a student grow personally and intellectually, while 12% think time should be devoted to both purposes.

The common denominator among all of these concepts is the future. The College's desire to equip students with an intellectual/ethical toolkit as they enter their professional lives led to the College's 2009 Quality Enhancement Plan (QEP), "ACT: The Art of Critical Thinking." ACT includes a junior-level course, Practicing the Art of Critical Thinking (PACT), as well as integrating critical thinking concepts across the core curriculum.

Under the College's accreditation guidelines from the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools-Commission on Colleges, each college is required to have a plan (QEP) for improving its academic program, based on mission, as part of the accreditation review process. The plan must have student learning outcomes that are assessable, thereby showing their degree of success.

PACT course content covers consideration of vocational direction and ethical reasoning. The course description puts it this way:

"This course represents the culminating experience that pulls together the basic competencies and ideas introduced in core and distribution courses taken. Working with a common text, students will engage a variety of questions that focus on the role of higher education in helping students to continue to develop value systems for fuller participation in society.

This course is very broadly about vocation, and as such will tread a line between being about ethics—more abstract thinking about what constitutes goodness—and focusing on careers. This focus makes it unique at the College—we're looking at texts in a different way from any other class at Huntingdon: not, how are they complex or self-contradictory, or historically significant, but how are they directly relevant to your life?"

Virginia Gaston '20, of Guntersville, Ala., says, "PACT is a course that teaches you how to think and how to understand, not what to think. I saw my PACT teacher the other day and I told her, thank you so much for that class! In that class environment, I learned how to disagree respectfully, and how to voice my own opinions."

"PACT is about finding our own identities," says Jordan Fleming '20, of Sheffield, Ala. "I have talked with so many alums who have told me that they felt more advanced than others in their professions or in graduate school because the College prepares us so well."

Huntingdon's next 10-year accreditation review will occur in 2019. As the College looks toward that site visit and self-study, a team of faculty, staff, and students is considering what the 2019 QEP will encompass. At the same time, the College has just developed its five-year strategic plan with Theme III focused on "placing service to students at the center of everything we do."

With both objectives in mind, the College plans to develop further the Art of Critical Thinking, sharpening and deepening the QEP's critical thinking, ethical reasoning, and consideration of vocational calling, as well as extending the conversation in new components from the sophomore through the senior years.

President J. Cameron West has talked about vocational calling and ethical reasoning as integral to his core educational values since arriving at the College in 2003. The deepening of these concepts in the Huntingdon core curriculum further fulfills his vision of the connection between mind, heart, and spirit necessary for a complete undergraduate education. "When I talk about calling, I refer not only to my own experience of feeling called to ministry, and then to ministry through higher education, but also to the many stories related to me by friends, students, and colleagues about their own identification of professional purpose," says West. "But calling is coupled with the questions, 'What do I believe? What are my core values?' Only when one stops emulating the beliefs of others and begins acting with a conscious awareness of his or her own beliefs is s/he truly demonstrating that wisdom has been gained."

Gabrielle Daniels, Racial Justice Fellow at the Equal Justice Initiative, offered a PACT lecture, a discussion of vocation and calling, in October. The lecture series is supported by a NetVUE grant.

Part of the implementation of the curricular emphasis has depended on well-trained teachers, in addition to alert learners. In 2017, Huntingdon welcomed Dr. William Cavanaugh, a professor of political theology, economic ethics, and ecclesiology at DePaul University, as a guest lecturer for PACT and other College audiences on the topic "You Can't Be Anything You Want (And It's a Good Thing, Too)." He also met with faculty in a roundtable discussion during his visit. Cavanaugh's appearance was funded by a grant from NetVUE, the Network for Vocation in Undergraduate Education, an arm of the Council on Independent Colleges funded by the Lilly Foundation.

NetVUE also funded a fall 2018 PACT lecture by Gabrielle Daniels, Racial Justice Fellow at the Equal Justice Initiative, who spoke on the topic of vocation and calling, illustrating that the path between the two is almost never straight or clearly defined.

In November, Patrick Jagoda and Ashlyn Sparrow of Game Changer Chicago provided a two-day faculty workshop on the use of games to improve learning outcomes and to facilitate student success. "The work of Game Changer was interesting to us for four reasons," says Dr. Tom Perrin, associate provost and director of the QEP. "First, they create games in a variety of media. Second, they teach faculty to teach students to develop their own games, which can be tailored to the needs of a particular course. Third, their games need not take up a whole semester. Finally, their games are all about what happens when ethical issues meet everyday practice."

"If we had a crystal ball and could see the future for each student, that might make it easier for the College," says Dr. Anna McEwan, provost, "but that circumstance would be far less meaningful for the student. The pathways of vocational awareness and self-discovery can only be walked by the one wearing the walking shoes. And it's through those journeys that one makes the connections leading to the next step, and the next, and the next." ■

HUNTINGDON HAPPENINGS

- During the spring, faculty approved the introduction of three interdisciplinary minors: Environmental Studies, Global Studies, and Public Policy; as well as a revision in the interdisciplinary Women's Studies minor. Each minor requires completion of 18 hours of study.
- Summer class enrollments have taken a new twist: you don't even have to be here to take the class! The State Authorization Reciprocity Agreement (SARA) has been expanded to include all states except California and Massachusetts, so unless students live in or will be staying in one of those states, they can take many summer classes online, allowing them to spend their summers at the beach or home or wherever they had planned to be, and still earn credit toward graduation. The new online summer class offerings led to the largest summer enrollment in memory in 2018.
- The Faculty Tenure and Promotion Committee and Provost Anna McEwan granted faculty promotions effective for the 2018–2019 academic year. Dr. John Berch '98 was promoted to professor of chemistry; Dr. Jimmy Jeffcoat was promoted to professor of religion; Dr. Anneliese Spaeth was promoted to associate professor of mathematics; Dr. Elizabeth Hutcheon was promoted to associate professor of English; and Dr. Stephen Sours was promoted to associate professor of religion. Dr. Jeffcoat was already tenured; the rest received tenure.
- Dr. Doba Jackson, professor of chemistry, has completed and published collaborative research with colleagues at Alabama State University. "A genetic analysis of an important hydrophobic interaction at the P22 tailspike protein N-terminal domain," was published in the Archives of Virology.
- Mr. Eric A. Kidwell, professor, director of the library, and Title IX coordinator, has accepted an appointment to the Association of Title IX Administrators advisory board.
- Dr. Jeremy Lewis, professor of political science, chaired a global research committee that conducted three panels of the International Political Science Association's World Congress, held in Brisbane, Australia, in July. He also presented a paper on transparency and eGovernment. Subsequently, he has been asked to act as lead editor and to provide an introduction and a chapter for an anthology project, "Digitalization of Politics: E-Governance, Surveillance and Sousveillance in Public Space," for a leading publisher in world politics.
- Huntingdon's Student Chapter of the American Chemical Society, under the direction of Dr. Maureen Kendrick Murphy '78, chemistry, was notified in October of selection as an Honorable Mention chapter in recognition of their activities during the 2017–2018 academic year. The letter says, "Professor Maureen Kendrick Murphy, faculty advisor of the chapter, deserves special commendation. Few faculty members are willing to make the great commitment of time and energy that a successful chapter requires. Professor Murphy's efforts certainly represent the best in undergraduate science education and mentoring around the country."

- An essay by assistant provost Dr. Tom Perrin, associate professor of English, "The Great American Novel in the 1970s," has been published in the new Cambridge University Press collection "American Literature in Transition: 1970–1980."
- Dr. Jared Rehm, assistant professor of kinesiology and biomechanics, was appointed by Governor Kay Ivey to serve on the Alabama Council on Developmental Disability. He works alongside other advocates to ensure consideration of people who have disabilities when statewide decisions are made.

TODD AWARD: Dr. Siobahn Stiles, assistant professor of communication studies, was honored by Provost Anna McEwan, right, with the Dr. and Mrs. John N. Todd Award for teaching excellence during Awards Convocation in April. The award is given annually to a junior, non-tenured faculty member.

SERVING MONTGOMERY: Members of athletic teams, sororities, and fraternities packed rations for the homeless as part of MLK Day of Service in January.

One of the Best

Huntingdon gained a number of accolades from national ranking publications in 2018, beginning with recognition as one of the best colleges and universities in Alabama by College Consensus, a new college aggregator. The ranking shows that Huntingdon achieved the highest student approval ratings of any college in the state and ranks overall in the top three colleges and universities. Consensus rankings are based on a comprehensive aggregate of published rankings and verified student reviews. College Consensus followed this ranking with naming Huntingdon to their list of Best Small Colleges in America.

With the release of the 2019 U.S. News & World Report America's Best Colleges ranking list, Huntingdon climbed two spots to number 11 among Regional Colleges-South and is ranked sixth among Best Values in the region.

U.S. News' rankings evaluate colleges and universities on 16 measures of academic quality, allowing viewers to see at a glance the relative quality of U.S. institutions of higher learning. Other than subjective peer assessment and guidance counselor assessment scores, the rest of the data on which the ranking is based is hard, quantifiable, and objective. The most weight in a college's score is given to outcomes (35%), including social mobility—new for the 2019 ranking—which factors the school's success at graduating students who have the highest financial need, as judged by the student's eligibility to receive a Pell Grant.

Huntingdon's statistics in one category, in particular, are stellar: the College achieved the second highest alumni giving percentage among all regional colleges and universities in the country.

Biochemistry Program Achieves ASBMB Accreditation

Huntingdon's biochemistry program has long been well-regarded by employers and graduate and professional schools, but a new accreditation will make the futures of biochemistry graduates shine even brighter. In January 2018, the College was notified that the Huntingdon biochemistry program had achieved national accreditation from the American Society for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology for a full seven-year term, through Oct. 14, 2024.

ASBMB has accredited college biochemistry and molecular biology programs at nearly 70 colleges, but Huntingdon is the only college in Alabama to have achieved this accreditation. ASBMB accreditation criteria include assessment of the program's curriculum, research opportunities for students, faculty training, and learning infrastructure. To have their degrees certified, biochemistry graduates must pass an assessment instrument provided by the ASBMB.

In issuing Huntingdon's accreditation, the biochemistry program was noted for: a rich and interdisciplinary curriculum; encouragement of students to pursue independent research; faculty working to ensure quality teaching, mentorship, and research experiences; and adequate course offerings for students within the program.

Huntingdon's primary accrediting body is the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges. ASBMB, based in Rockville, Md., is a national, major-specific accreditation in addition to SACSCOC accreditation. ■

Farewell to a Legend

Coach Buzz Phillips, athletic director emeritus and long-time coach for Huntingdon, announced his retirement in November. Phillips has spent 25 of the past 28 years at Huntingdon, serving as an assistant baseball coach (1991–1996), helping to restart the men's basketball program and taking the team to the National Small College Athletic Association championship; serving as director of athletics (2004–2013); and coaching the women's basketball program for 12 seasons. The women's team has won 186 games since the beginning of their NCAA-III era in 2004, and Phillips has been at the helm for 164 of those wins. As the 2018 season began, he was on medical leave. Paige Huff '08 has been named interim head women's coach.

"Coach Phillips has had a significant and positive impact on me during the past 25 years," Huntingdon head baseball coach D.J. Conville '98 said. "He recruited me here from junior college in the spring of 1994 when he was the assistant baseball coach. Since then, I have had the pleasure of playing for him, working for him, and working alongside him. He is first class. He is a wonderful friend, and he has always been great to me. I truly appreciate the impact he has had on me."

Huntingdon Director of Athletics Mike Turk said Phillips made a lasting impact on Huntingdon—an impact that isn't just judged by wins and losses, but on lives touched. "I want to personally thank Buzz for all he has done for Huntingdon College, and also for me," said Turk. "Buzz is a large part of the reason I came to Huntingdon 15 years ago. He has touched many lives during his time here as a coach, athletic administrator, mentor, and friend to all who came in contact with him. I am thankful for our time together and I know Huntingdon College is a better place because of Buzz Phillips' time here."

Coach Buzz Phillips, with former player Betsy Jones Cagle '07

"From the time I entered Huntingdon as a freshman in 2011 until I graduated, Coach Buzz became more than just my coach. He became my family," said Pat Pickens '15, the Lady Hawks' all-time leading scorer. "It saddens me that the time has come for his retirement because I know of his love for the game of basketball. We made history together, we laughed, we cried, and we overcame obstacles together. As a freshman, my goal was to earn his trust and once I did that, my goal became to always keep his trust. I played my heart out for him every single game. He was a great coach, and he is an amazing human being."

"As much success as we've had on the court, seeing these players go on to success after basketball is what is really satisfying," said Phillips. "Getting a young person in here as a freshman and seeing them develop as a player, as a student, and as a person so they can be successful in life, that's what really counts."

The College's fieldhouse is named in Coach Phillips' honor.

SEPARATE JOURNEYS, TOGETHER

Having fun on Charlie's Bunion in the Great Smoky Mountains

Sells Yates '83, says she championed his decision, never realizing what a personal journey she was about to begin in her own right.

Their adventures began March 17, 2018. At first, Rick planned just to complete a section of the trail and be gone for about 40 days. Lisa traveled from their home near Atlanta to visit Rick and Mike at a stop in Gatlinburg about three weeks into the trip. "I could see the excitement in Rick's eyes, hear the passion in his voice and the exciting stories from the hike so far," says Lisa. "Everything I heard and saw stuck with me." On their next phone visit, she encouraged him to finish what he'd started—to follow his personal yellow rocky-brick road.

"Now I had to get in the right headspace, realizing that my best friend would be gone for the next five-and-a-half months," says Lisa.

Rick and Mike settled into a daily routine: rise early, hike three hours, break, hike two to three more hours, afternoon lunch break, hike three hours and finish the day. "When possible, we tried to take our breaks at some scenic spot on the trail," says Rick. "Some of my favorite memories are the simple times of rest during a break and breathing in the beauty. One afternoon, we had completed a long climb up a mountain and found a perfect ledge to sit on and take our lunch break. It was so quiet. We had a long view of the valley as an afternoon thunderstorm was slowly approaching. We sat on the ledge and listened to the wind, to the thunder roll across the valley, smelled the rain as it approached. It was a gift."

"I think the most significant change I had was gaining the knowledge, through experience, that I can survive with very little," Rick continues. "For example, I can live with only basic needs being met, I can overcome daily body pains, I can deal with rain for days on end, I can push through the cold, I can find a place to sleep in almost any setting, I can overcome fears, etc. I survived six months carrying everything I need to live on my back."

The Appalachian Trail begins in Amicalola Falls, Ga., and ends at the top of Mt. Katahdin in Maine, covering 14 states and 2,190.9 miles. Thru-hiking the trail—hiking the entire trail in one go—can take five to seven months to complete, during which every weather condition must be endured. It's a tough journey. In 2017, 4,224 people attempted to thru-hike the trail, but only 25% completed it.

Rick Yates '82, a retired IT executive, had thought about hiking sections of the trail for years. When his friend, Mike Davis, said in December 2017 that he was planning a thru-hike, Rick says, "That was just the spark I needed to get out there and go for it." Rick's wife, Lisa

Climbing the cliffs of Lehigh Gap near Palmerton, Penn.

Meanwhile, Lisa, who had married Rick at age 21, learned she could overcome obstacles she'd never faced before, as well. "Just as the A.T. has twists and turns and mud and muck, life can also take the same paths," says Lisa. "Things started breaking, leaking, squeaking, and falling apart in the house, yard, and car." She faced the deaths of two friends, a family member's cancer diagnosis, and her uncle's hospice care. There were happy, wish-you-were-here-to-share-this moments, as well. Their daughter (Kathryn Yates Williams '09) and son-in-law began selling crops at their new farm after months of hard work. Their son announced his engagement. Just as Rick enjoyed the beauty of the trail and of creation all around him, Lisa says, "life can bring renewal, promise, brightness and exciting challenges." She, too, took notice of quiet time and learned to meditate and do yoga. "I learned how to just be and find contentment in being."

Summiting Mount Katahdin near Millinocket, Maine—the final northbound destination of the AT at mile 2,190.9

Rick found new self-knowledge in his drift away from daily pressures. "The longer you are on the trail and disconnected from the normal fast pace of our lives, the more aware you become of the nature, wildlife, and beauty around you. You become more connected to the earth. So you find yourself stopping just to watch trees sway or fog lift on a lake, listen to squirrel chatter or a birdsong, smell pine or rhododendron, taste wild raspberries or fresh spring water," says Rick.

He also found camaraderie in the trail community. "The community of hikers on the trail is really beautiful. It's an eclectic blend of people from different age groups, states, countries, and life experiences all working toward a common goal. It is not competitive—it is supportive. That is rare these days. We didn't talk so much about the things that separate us, but about the things we have in common. The shared goal of the trail bound us together in a special way.

"Another very memorable experience was the final day of the hike. We awoke early to climb Mt. Katahdin, the last mountain of our hike. At 6:20 a.m. we began the 5.3 mile hike from our campsite to the peak, with over 4,100 feet of elevation gain in just a three-mile stretch. It was the most technically challenging climb of the trail, but all of our trail experience had prepared us for that day. The weather was perfect. As we climbed above the tree line, we saw the stunning Maine wilderness around us, and the sun gleaming on nearby mountains. Our emotions were intense and spilling over. Reaching the summit sign on Mt. Katahdin was the culmination of almost six months of hiking. It was an amazing joy and sense of accomplishment."

Lisa and their son, Connor, met Rick at the airport. "We got back to our house, where I had made white blazes [the way the A.T. is marked] and put them from our driveway, up the walkway, to the front door! I made a sign saying, 'The GA to ME A.T. thru-hike officially ends here!' Just by pure chance, almost all of our neighbors were arriving home from work and school and greeted him with big hugs and congratulations. It was special and we couldn't have timed it any better!"

Lisa quotes wisdom learned from her cousin, "We sometimes can't see what our energy is being saved for until we go through the growing hours."

Lisa concludes, "Whatever trail you might be blazing, give yourself grace. Don't take each day for granted. Do the hard stuff. Don't settle for anything but the best and remember the best doesn't come overnight. If you need help, ask. There are experiences to learn from by tackling them alone. There are relationships to be renewed, ... to be formed, ... to be found that never existed until you're out there in your own wilderness."

DONOR REPORT

Sandy Kelsner, executive assistant to the president, was honored with the Mary Mildred Sullivan Award during Awards Convocation in April 2018. In bestowing the honor, President West cited her character, generosity, and selfless spirit. The Mary Mildred Sullivan Award seeks to perpetuate the excellence of character and humanitarian service of the late Mrs. Sullivan, wife of philanthropist Algernon Sydney Sullivan, by recognizing and honoring such qualities in others. The award is given only by selected "representative institutions" in the southern United States to non-student members of their college communities. Honorees demonstrate a "spirit of helpfulness and an awareness of the beauty and value of the intangible elements of life," such that "the spiritual standard of the institution may be judged by the character of the person to whom the award is made." She is pictured, from left, with her husband, Chris, and sons Matt Kelsner '07 and Todd Kelsner '02.

Mike Jones, father of Huntingdon Hall of Famer Tyler "Top" Jones '08, was inducted into the Huntingdon Athletic Hall of Fame during Homecoming 2018. A stellar baseball player in his own right, Mike earned a contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1966, but was drafted into the Army and never got a chance to pursue his dream of professional baseball. Upon his return in 1968, he was intrigued by fast pitch softball—a sport he has played for 25 years. He competed in 15 National Fast Pitch Championships, making it to the final four in 1986 with the Tuscaloosa Travelers in Las Cruces, N.M. In 1995, he became a member of the national Men's Senior Baseball League and has won 13 national championship rings. What sets Mike apart from other loyal Huntingdon parents is the devotion that he has continued to demonstrate to Hawks baseball during the ten years following his son's graduation. Regardless of where the Hawks are playing in the spring, Mike is usually there, situated along the first- or third-base sideline. He's a quiet spectator, but vocal behind the scenes in providing financial support and leadership for the baseball program. Through his generosity, enhancements to the baseball complex have included covered batting cages and renovated stadium seating.

Trustee vice chairman Leura Garrett Canary '78 led a toast for Huntingdon neighbors and friends as the College celebrated the launch of the Building Great Lives campaign with a party at the Montgomery Country Club.

Legacy Gift

1955 May Queen Barbara Cade Hunt '55 served as president of her senior class. Barbara loved Huntingdon. When she passed away in 2017, the Office of College and Alumni Relations received a call from her husband informing the College that Barbara had left special instructions for a gift to be made from her estate to the Dr. Gordon and Winn Chappell Endowed Scholarship at Huntingdon. According to Mr. Hunt, Dr. Chappell was Barbara's favorite professor. Barbara was a member of the John Massey Heritage Society and a former member of the Huntingdon Alumni Board. Her legacy gift will allow future Huntingdon students to be inspired by exceptional faculty, just as she was.

Howard Adams, who has served on the Huntingdon College board of trustees since 2003, was granted Trustee Emeritus status at the May board meeting. His daughter, Susan Adams Cooper '99, and granddaughter, Caroline Cooper Dunn '18, are alumnae.

Legacy Gift

After graduating from Huntingdon, Mary Ann Jenkins '53 of Moulton, Ala., completed a master's degree in social work at the University of Alabama. In 1966, Mary Ann created a will, leaving half of her estate to Huntingdon and half to the University of Alabama. Mary Ann died in 2014. She had never married and had no children. Unaware of a will, her family found her estate wishes while cleaning out her home. Unlike others who have left lasting gifts to the College, Mary Ann was a lost contact in the Huntingdon alumni database. We wish she could have heard our heartfelt thanks for her generous legacy gift.

Huntingdon Dedicates New Soccer/Softball Complex

Although soccer and softball have been part of Huntingdon College's athletic teams for nearly 30 years, the teams have not enjoyed separate spaces on campus. Now, with the dedication of the W. James Samford Jr. Soccer and Softball Complex, each sport has its own field for practice and play, as well as new lockers, restrooms, and an indoor press box. The softball field was dedicated March 24, while the soccer field was dedicated Sept. 8. The stadium and fields were made possible by a gift from the W. James Samford Jr. Foundation.

Huntingdon trustee Lucinda Samford Cannon, sister to W. James (Jimmy) Samford Jr.; her cousin, Preston Barnett; and her son, Race Cannon, were instrumental in making the gift to the College that served as a catalyst for the refurbishment of the shared fields. Construction began during the 2016–2017 academic year and continued well into the 2017–2018 academic year.

"Our participation in NCAA-Division III athletics has provided a tremendous infusion of students into our college community—students who would not have come here without the opportunity to continue playing the sports they played in middle- and high school," said Huntingdon President J. Cameron West. "Our athletic events unify our campus community, provide a portal for the Cloverdale and River Region communities to support Huntingdon, and create connections and memories that our student-athletes will carry with them forever. We are so grateful for this gift, which has made it possible to provide dedicated fields and facilities for the men and women who play soccer and for the women who play softball."

Jimmy Samford, raised in Opelika and educated at Auburn University, was commissioned as a 2nd Lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force and served three years, then returned to higher education, completing his law degree at the University of Alabama. From 1980 until his death in 2003, Samford lived just a few blocks away from the Huntingdon campus, continuing a legacy of relationship between the Samford family and the College that dates back to the College's founding in Tuskegee. Two ancestors were instrumental in steering the College through times of growth and expansion, including Samford's great-great grandfather, William Flewellen Samford, who raised funds to expand the residence halls at Tuskegee Female College (Huntingdon's earliest identity) in 1856. Both of Samford's and Cannon's grandmothers attended Tuskegee Female College. Cannon has also continued the family's close connection to the College as a long-standing member of the Huntingdon board of trustees.

"Multiple major gifts over the years by the W. James Samford Jr. Foundation have propelled Huntingdon athletics into the NCAA era with great momentum, including the construction of our football and lacrosse stadium on the Cloverdale campus, which bears Jimmy Samford's name," said West. Huntingdon's School of Business and Professional Studies is also named in Samford's memory.

President J. Cameron West with trustee Lucinda Cannon and her grandsons at the dedication of the soccer field in September.

The softball team thanked trustee Lucinda Samford Cannon as the new field was dedicated at the W. James Samford Jr. Soccer and Softball Complex March 24.

Continue the Legacy!

Alumni can impact positively the lives of prospective students with the awarding of the $11,000 Alumni Legacy Grant. Alums may refer one student annually by sending the student's name, address, phone numbers, email address, and current school information; your name, address, class year, and contact information; and a paragraph or two about how you know the student and why you think he or she would be an asset to Huntingdon. The Alumni Legacy Grant is renewable for up to three additional years of study, requires on-campus residency, and requires the student to maintain satisfactory academic progress toward the completion of his or her degree. Applications cannot be submitted after the first day of classes of a student's first year at Huntingdon College.

Please send your referral to Huntingdon College Office of College and Alumni Relations, 1500 E. Fairview Ave., Montgomery, AL 36106; alumni@hawks.huntingdon.edu. You may complete the online form at <https://www.huntingdon.edu/alumni-legacy-grant>.

Legacy Gift

In 1996, Margaret Tucker '45, a resident of Anniston, Ala., established the Margaret Tucker Endowed Scholarship at Huntingdon. Four years later, she created a charitable remainder trust, for which Huntingdon was named one of eight beneficiaries. Margaret passed away in 2016. Legacy Gift

Marie Baker Sinclair '44, a retired school administrator living in Northport, Ala., was a devoted alumna, giving an annual gift, as well as her time and energy, to the College. Marie attended events, recruited students, and mustered support among her classmates. She also offered a generous share of her opinions to better the College she loved. Marie passed away in 2017. During 2017–2018, the College received her estate gift, supporting an endowed scholarship she established at Huntingdon in 1985 in memory of her parents. This scholarship was Marie's legacy to Huntingdon.

Keep Up the Outstanding Work!

In the 2019 U.S. News and World Report "America's Best Colleges" edition, Huntingdon ranks second among regional colleges and universities in the country for the percentage of alumni who give. We thank you for your support of the College you love so well!

Student Alumni Association

The Huntingdon Student Alumni Association was formed in 2012 by a group of students who wanted to demonstrate their loyalty to Huntingdon and to assist the Office of College and Alumni Relations by making gifts of $10 or more to the Huntingdon Fund. These students' names are included among the classes of 2018, 2019, 2020, and 2021. We celebrate these students for their foresight, for their understanding that each private college's strength is built by the support of private gifts, and for their enthusiastic support.

Future Steps

At Huntingdon, the Center for Career and Vocation is part of the Office of College and Alumni Relations, allowing for closer and more immediate connections to be made between Huntingdon students, faculty, staff, and alumni and friends who are, in turn, connected in professional fields students want to enter.

The CCV's annual Pre-Health Professions Fair brings to campus colleges and universities that offer graduate and professional health-related programs to recruit Huntingdon students for further study.

CCV Central Perk brings students, faculty, staff, and community leaders together to make connections over coffee and scones.

The annual Teacher Education job fair brings school districts who are seeking teachers for the coming year together with teacher candidates who are preparing to graduate.

CCV director Sherry Leigh Lacey Farquhar '13 led students in a seminar on graduate school selection and application in January. Last year, U.S. News and World Report named Huntingdon one of the top schools in the country for sending students to graduate or professional schools after graduation.

Meet the Firms is an annual event that brings accounting and business firms to campus to recruit Huntingdon business and accounting majors. In November, six alumni accountants came to Huntingdon to recruit for their firms: from left, John Haynes '18, Carr Riggs & Ingram; Brianne Smith, assistant professor of accounting; Hunter Smith '15, Warren Averett; Cody Causey '10, Alabama Department of Revenue; Carlee Gardner Sims '15, Jackson Thornton; Kali Martin Belyeu '16, Jackson Thornton; and Shirin Torabinejad Long '15, PricewaterhouseCoopers.

- Mary Ann Oglesby Neeley '54, right, died Aug. 29, 2018, in Montgomery. Mary Ann was one of Alabama's most respected historians. She was an expert on the city of Montgomery and on Huntingdon's history, having served as research assistant to Dr. Rhoda Coleman Ellison's "History of Huntingdon College: 1854-1954" when she was an undergraduate. Mary Ann taught for Huntingdon and for Auburn University periodically during her long career, and her enthusiasm for history was effervescent. She was curious—a quality of the best learners and knowers—seeking connections from the past among the many ideas, institutions, and individuals she researched and about which she spoke and wrote. Committed to giving accurate, documented information, her demeanor was always calm and confident, while her love of the subject matter was evident from the sparkle in her eyes. She stepped away from teaching to perform a historic structure survey funded by a federal grant, and then went to work for the historic preservation nonprofit founded by James Loeb, the Landmarks Foundation. She remained the foundation's executive director for 25 years, while returning to the classroom periodically and conducting notable tours of the city and its cemeteries. Her published works include "Old Alabama Town," "Montgomery and the River Region: Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow," and "The Works of Matthew Blue." Our thoughts and prayers are with her family, including her husband of 64 years, Aubrey Neeley '59; her grandson, Graham Neeley '11 (pictured, next to Mary Ann in photo); and her sisters, pictured from left, Lenore Oglesby Kirkpatrick '56 and Elizabeth (Libba) Oglesby Johnson '60.

Levanda, associate athletic director, remembers Coach Mabry telling him the story of how he got the coaching job in his senior year at Huntingdon. When Coach Mabry learned there would be a new baseball team he asked Coach Neal Posey, "So who's going to be the coach?" Coach Posey handed John a bag full of bats and helmets and said, "You are." John said he was stunned. Upon graduation, he continued his coaching career, serving 14 years, cumulatively, as head coach of the baseball program and assistant coach for the basketball program. He taught at Huntingdon for 38 years while also serving in adjunct positions at Troy State University, Auburn University-Montgomery, and Alabama State University.
